Cocktail Chic. Pink preferred

When an event calls for a cocktail dress code, that means you've got permission to look a little more polished and put together than the norm. The idea is to look dressed up without going full-formal. It's elegant and elevated, but not stuffy. It's not as fancy as black tie, but it's fancier than business casual. According to the Merriam-Webster dictionary, chic is "smart elegance and sophistication". Chic is all about choosing appropriate quality fabrics, combining two or three colors elegantly and, generally, making you look and feel luxurious and classy. Cocktail chic is the sweet spot between dressy casual and formal. It's a dress code that allows you to break the black-tie rules while still looking very put-together.
